New Baptist Church For Lincoln Estates

The following have been invited to form a council to assist and advise in the organization of a new Baptist church: Three members of the Executive Board of the Illinois Conference, State Missionary John Hedeon, the Pastor and one other member of the following Baptist churches: Bethel Baptist, Joliet; Emmanuel Baptist, Chicago Heights; Elim Baptist, Chicago; and Englewood Sw. Baptist, Chicago.

The Council will meet with the group that will form the new church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lettis at 3:30 in the afternoon.

After the church has been organized a public meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. that evening at the Ann Rutledge school house. Every one is cordially invited to this meeting.

A lot has already been donated and plans are being made for the erection of a church in the spring. In the meantime services will continue as usual in District School Number 156A.

Mission Head Makes Report

A report of the Morning Star Mission for the month of November, the first month of the thirty-first year, as reported by Supt. Peter H. McCarthy, lists the following: Conversions, 44; free meals, 1631; free beds, 644; new clothing, 160 persons; police court and jail visits, 27; family relief, 18; paid bus and railroad fares to 18 persons.

Will Welcome Santa With Parade

The Retail Merchants Association of Chicago Heights will stage a wonderful parade in Chicago Heights this Saturday. This parade is for the purpose of giving Santa Claus a rousing good welcome when he comes to that city for the first time this year.

Santa will bring with him many folk from fairy land, such as Humpty-Dumpty, the Three Bears, King Cole, Ferdinand and the Bull, Jack Sprat, and many other such characters, to please young and old alike. This parade has no advertising features or names in it and the floats are costing in the neighborhood of $1,500. It is a gala day for the kiddies.

This is the first time that the city of Chicago Heights has welcomed Santa in this grand manner and all those who can should put forth special efforts to attend. The parade will start from the old Bloom High school at 1:30 p.m. and make a complete circuit of the down town section.

Will Issue Christmas Edition Next Week

Next week we will issue our annual Christmas edition. This number will be filled with ads from the merchants of the surrounding communities, offering many specials in Christmas merchandise. The edition will have a cover page in colors.

Business men desiring to advertise in this edition should reserve their space within the next day or two, as the demand for space is heavy.

Capture Prize In Saddle Event

Dick Frohlich and Henry Lamberty of the Hilltop farm at 135th and Harlem, in Orland, won first prize in a five gaited saddle horse event the past week at the International Stock Show in Chicago. Mr. Frohlich rode Bess of Hilltop and Mr. Lamberty rode Broadway Bill. Both have won prizes in other stock shows previously and have shown their horses in various parts of the country.

Turn Over Fines

Police Magistrate Albert Hentsch turned in $37 in fines to the Mokena village board Tuesday night collected since the campaign was opened a few weeks ago to stop speeding, reckless driving, and running stop signs.

House Warming of Editor's New Home Gala Affair

About 150 relatives and friends attended the house warming and the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler, held in their new home in Mokena Saturday afternoon and evening.

The joint event was thoroughly enjoyed by the many guests as well as by the honored couple. Friends started to call in the afternoon and continued to come in a steady stream all evening. Following this informal reception, at which the celebrants received felicitations of these friends, a three course dinner for the relatives and close friends, was held in the spacious basement of the new home.

Covers were laid for sixty, at long rows of tables, decorated in silver paper. A silver circle was created of silver leaves from which was suspended a silver bell above the figure "25" also in silver. This, and a beautiful cake with decorations in the shape of a lovely house, the gifts of friends, graced the table.

Mrs. Fred Brown and her corp of helpers was in charge of the dinner and all were more than delighted with her offering of culinary art.

Mr. Harland Merrell, foreman at the News-Bulletin plant, served as toastmaster and did a very excellent job. A public address system was used.

Robert Bechstein, president of the Mokena Civic Association gave a splendid talk, and in a reminiscent manner, reviewed the events of the past 25 years in the lives of Editor and Mrs. Semmler and of their various accomplishments, climaxed by the building of their new home. He also took a change at the future for them and foretold events.

Other guests spoke during the course of the evening among whom were: Theodore Oestreich of Joliet, brother of Mrs. Semmler; Joseph Hartley, County Clerk of Will County; Ernest Bitterman and Ivan Rhodes, also of the County Clerk's office.

Mr. Otto Ehtor, editor and publisher of the German-American of Joliet, as a brother of the publishing fraternity, did special honors to the occasion with his excellent address of humor and hearty felicitations.

At the close of the dinner the guests gathered in the living rooms and enjoyed a musical program.

Mr. Arthur Lambrecht of Frankfort, sang three baritone solos, accompanied on the piano by Miss Collins of Chicago Heights. Mr. Lambrecht is a popular singer and is active in musical and recreation activities in Chicago Heights.

Mrs. J. Paul duPlessis of Chicago, sang several beautiful selections and was also accompanied by Miss Collins.

Adding to the charm of the program were the musical saw selections by Mr. Merrell, who has had much radio experience, having been engaged in radio work on stations, KYW, WLS, WEMP, Milwaukee, and others.

The festivities were climaxed with dancing, music being furnished by Harold Balaz of Mokena with his recorded music and who is also a member of the News-Bulletin staff.

During the afternoon and evening, tea and tea cakes, were served in the dining room, which was presided over by Mrs. L. G. Bruder and Mrs. Robert Bechstein of Mokena.

The silver register book was in charge of Mrs. Leona Withers of Blue Island who was ring-bearer at the wedding 25 years ago, and by Miss Dorothy Hall of Mokena. Mrs. Wm. Ketner of Joliet and Mrs. Edward Kruse of Blue Island, cousins, presided as hostesses.

The honored couple received many beautiful gifts, congratulatory cards and flowers.

Among the guests was Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill of Downers Grove, State Representative of the 41st District and her friend, Mrs. Alice Payne.

Mr. and Mrs. Semmler wish to heartily thank all who helped them celebrate their silver wedding and house warming; for the many beautiful gifts and for the expressions of esteem and friendship. It was a day long to be remembered by them.

Must Pay For Permit

The Mokena village board went on record at their regular meeting Tuesday night to limit the number of special permits to local taverns to keep open from 12 to 2 a.m., and on Saturday nights from 1 to 3 a.m., on special holidays to four free permits. If the taverns seek more than four permits they will be obliged to pay $5 for each and every permit.

Application for any of the permits mentioned must be filed with the village clerk.

Mokena Couple Will Observe 55th Wedding Anniversary Dec. 13

Mokena Couple Honored on 20th Anniversary

On December 6, Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Marti opened their home to friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Lowe and co-partners of Mr. Lowe, to help them celebrate their 20th wedding anniversary. After all the guests arrived at 6:30 o'clock, Mr. Marti motored to Mokena to get Mr. and Mrs. Lowe to spend an evening together, as was often the occasion. Nothing was surmised whatsoever. When they arrived at the Marti home the house was partially dark and this planned affair was a total surprise to Mr. Lowe. He was not only showered but pelted with rice as they entered.

When the house was fully illuminated the couple found many friends gathered around them and were again surprised when they saw such a beautifully decorated table and everything that goes with such an occasion, which was prepared by Mrs. I. D. Marti, Mrs. Harold Spiess and Mrs. Henry Shevlin. In the center was a very pretty wedding cake, which was arranged by Mrs. Henry Shevlin. After the wedding dinner Mrs. Hafele sang "O Promise Me." Rev. Hefe held a brief service for the occasion.

Mr. I. D. Marti was the only sponsor present. Mrs. Hafele then sang "I Love You Truly." The Lowes were then honored with music rendered by Jean Shevlin, Gordon Spiess, Jackie and Tommy Gardner, Marjorie and Corrine Marti. Mr. Ira Gardner also rendered several baritone solos. Games and dancing was the entertainment of the evening, and even the jitterbug was not omitted. A group of eleven chivalrously the couple with plenty of old tin pans and kettles and the old buzz saw that helped make the noise 20 years ago was in on it, too. The young captain Gordon Spiess very cleverly demanded Mr. Lowe to turn over the fee that he and his group had planned for. Mrs. Caroline Marti, who is 83 years of age, joined in the evening's fun with the couple and their friends. After a late hour guests departed for their homes, leaving their very best wishes with the couple, and to Mr. and Mrs. Marti for the lovely hospitality.

Miss Dorothy Lauffer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lauffer, Tinsley Park, and Clyde Yunker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Yunker, Mokena, were united in marriage last Saturday afternoon, December 2, in the parsonage of the St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena, with the Rev. Theodore Hafele officiating.

The bride was attired in blue velvet and accessories to match. The matron of honor was Mrs. Walter Lauffer, who was gowned in wine velvet.

The groom was attended by Walter Lauffer, brother of the bride. A wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents, about twenty-five guests attending.

Republicans Hear Senator Searcy Announce His Candidacy for Gov.

Before a cheering, enthusiastic audience of friends, former neighbors, and party leaders from fifteen Illinois counties, State Senator Earl B. Searcy tonight announced himself a candidate for governor of Illinois, subject to the Republican primary next April 9, at Palmyra, November 29.

The state legislator, keeping a promise made last summer when petitioned by residents of central Illinois, returned to the town of his birth to proclaim his candidacy.

In a short but meaty address Senator Searcy pointed to a "tradition which calls for a nominee from Cook county for U. S. senator and a nominee for governor from down state."

Experience Behind Platform

Searcy declared he was answering the requests of "literally thousands" of Illinois citizens in entering the gubernatorial race, and after calling for Republican solidarity pointing toward "winning the war next fall," presented a platform based on his experience during nearly a quarter of a century of actual participation in government of Illinois. He proposed "to simplify the state government and reduce state spending."

In his platform the candidate declared: "Our state institutions will not be operated as political training camps or as ports of scandal."

"Honest elections will be restored in Illinois, even if the military establishment must serve to guarantee them."

"Illinois will be managed on the assumption that taxpayers are as honest as public officials..."

"Adequate relief will be provided, but without making political pawns of recipients."

Vigorous Applause

The meeting at the high school, which was planned by Republican committeemen and a committee of citizens of Palmyra, was attended by party members from Cook, Will, and every central Illinois county.

The candidate declared he had postponed his announcement "to see whether some outstanding Illinoisan, versed in state problems... might be suggested for the office of chief executive." He then added, "No development of this nature seems probable."

The audience, when Searcy proceeded to answering the question of his candidacy, interrupted his thirty

NO HAM AND EGGS?

Pension Sentiment Expected to Boom When Payments Start Next Month

By STEPHEN BRAINTREE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON.—Californians won't eat ham and eggs this winter, nor will Dr. Francis E. Townsend cash a $200-a-month pension check. Ohio has repudiated the Bigelow old age retirement plan, too, but the smart politicians aren't fooling themselves. The high pressure pension advocates will bust into full fury before 1940's elections have become history.

The ruffled gray hair of America's elders may be smoothed somewhat on January 1 when first benefits are paid under the federal old age retirement plan. A little is better than nothing, but it's only a drop in the bucket compared to the pensioners' demands. Instead of placating the aging voters in a presidential election year, the small social security payments may well boomerang back to the White House. You can't taste cake without wanting more.

Pension Payments Costly.

It's no trifling sum that the social security administration will hand out to some 912,000 persons next year, congress having advanced the starting date of payments from 1942. An estimated $114,000,000 will be paid out starting January 1 to 485,000 primary beneficiaries, 125,000 wives and 20,000 widows over 65 years of age, to 78,000 young widows with dependent children, 194,000 dependent children, and 10,000 dependent parents.

This is entirely apart from social security's old age assistance program, already operative in 48 states, District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii. Under the latter plan, which distributed $36,750,000 to 1,897,400 recipients during November alone, the federal government matches state contributions up to $15 a month per beneficiary. Thus, if the state provides a cash allowance of $12.50 a month for old people in need, the U. S. will supply another $12.50.

PENSIONEERS—Ira Culp, right, 74-year-old Cleveland, and his companion (unidentified) both worked for the Bigelow plan which was defeated in Ohio last month. It would have paid $50 a month to all persons over 60, money to be raised by a state income tax and a special levy on high-priced land. But Ohio pensioners, like those in California, aren't downhearted.

California Leads.

How this plan has mushroomed is shown in records of five states wherein more than 100,000 needy get monthly checks. There are 137,000 in Illinois and 136,000 in California. Ohio, Texas and New York are the others. California, home of the pension movement, heads the list in amount disbursed. In November that land of sunshine and honey handed out $4,413,000.

Pensioners insist the nation can stand a large scale retirement program, but realists in the administration doubt that we can afford it. They regard the 1940 payments as a modest start and refuse to make any more concessions to hold the pension vote next year. Just a few weeks ago Security Administrator Paul McNutt emerged from a White House conference to tell reporters it would be unwise to predict any broad revisions in the present system. There has been talk of combatting the war-inspired merchant marine depression via social security, and of expanding the present plan to include self-employed persons, but the New Deal promises it will sponsor no increase in payments.

Pensions Go to Congress.

It's not expected that 1940 elections will make congress any more pension-minded than it was last June when the house voted down the Townsend plan 302 to 97. That plan would give a pension of $200 a month to all persons over 60 who retire from work, the money to come from a 2 per cent tax on all transactions.

Townsendites are fighting furiously with another group which wants the same general idea wrapped up in another package. This is the General Welfare federation, whose bill is now pending in the house. It would amend the social security act to give $30 to $60 a month to all persons over 60, the cost to be paid by a gross income tax of 2 per cent. Deductions would be permitted from gross income of the cost of materials used in the products of industry, and of the first $60 per month, or $720 per year, of gross income received.

Seek Early Vote.

The potency of this plan is shown by the fact that 130 house members have signed a petition to discharge the house ways and means committee, in whose hands the bill now rests, and bring it to the floor. The old age retirement plan which goes in effect January 1 is figured this way.

Beneficiaries will receive a basic amount equal to 40 per cent of the first $50 of the average monthly wage plus 10 per cent of the next $200 of average monthly wages. To this is added 1 per cent of the basic amount for each year in which the individual earns at least $200 in covered employment.

Thus a worker whose average monthly income was $100 would receive monthly benefits of $25.75. If married, he would receive an additional $12.88 for his wife, if over 65, and $12.88 for each dependent child. On the same basis a widow's benefits would amount to $19.31 per month; a widow with one dependent child would get $32.19, and a widow with two dependent children, $45.06. No benefit may be less than $10 a month, and the highest will be $85.

The funds come from a social security tax of 1 per cent each assessed against employers and employees, covering all wages up to an annual total of $3,000.

Taxpayers Will Decide.

Rational and unbiased observers of the pension movement can see dangers on both sides. A citizen who's worked hard all his life and now faces indigent old age is apt to be a bit too demanding on his government. And youngsters, who fall heir to their elders' jobs and must foot the pension bill, aren't apt to be very sympathetic about large pensions. At the same time, however, youth is becoming more pension-conscious.

It won't be necessary to worry about alleged "crackpot" retirement schemes. On some not-too-distant day one of them may be legislated into being, but not for long. Eventually the electorate will decide how big a tax load it can carry.

New Deal insiders about-face on Paul V. McNutt . . . Fleet of destroyers helpless against pocket battleship, as explained by experts . . . How idea of transferring U. S. ships to the Irish flag originated.

WASHINGTON.—It may not mean a thing, but it is mighty curious how all the inside New Dealers have suddenly taken Paul V. McNutt to their bosoms. It was only a few months back that they were denouncing him as a Fascist, to put it mildly. They were bitter, of course, about what they considered his reactionary attitude toward labor when he was governor of Indiana.

Why such a man should be singled out by the "Chief" and made high commissioner of the Philippines, they simply could not understand.

At about this time McNutt was a guest—during a visit to Washington from the Philippines—at a stag dinner at which President Roosevelt was also a guest. A little skit was put on, with McNutt the target. The President was urged, in advance, to pull a certain line when the character depicting McNutt should conclude his bombast. The original suggestion came from a man very close to the New Deal. The committee arranging the skits for this dinner thought it would be a wow. Not only that, but they were sure the President would take malicious pleasure in taking a part in the entertainment which would be humiliating to McNutt.

Much to their surprise, the President merely smiled at the suggestion, and the skit had to be played without including the Chief Executive as one of its actors.

Bear in mind that this dates back to when McNutt was still in the Philippines, though very much a candidate for the presidency. New Dealers all over town were interested in the story, but they all agreed that it would be beneath the President's dignity to take part in such a slapstick comedy.

Refused to Take Part in Skit That Belittled McNutt

The point is that anyone who has seen Roosevelt, either in Albany or Washington, at parties of this sort knows perfectly well that he thoroughly enjoys that particular sort of slapstick.

He openly enjoys taking part in the original skit, if there is some point to his doing so. And he finds plenty of things to kid his lieutenants about without seeking outside help.

But he refused to take part in a skit which would have belittled the Hoosier who was so obviously gunning for Roosevelt's job!

It took the New Dealers a long time to get on to this policy of the President towards McNutt. Even after he was brought into the present administration setup there was considerable wailing from the left wingers. Some of them privately opined that perhaps the "Chief" was purposely assigning McNutt a task which would be so big that he would rattle around in it—rattle so obviously that he would destroy himself in the eyes of the country as a contender for a still bigger job.

Of course there is nothing to prove that this last theory is impossible. So far McNutt is not rattling. He may never rattle. The job may make him instead of killing him off. But perhaps that is what Roosevelt has been intending ever since long before he declined to help make a laughing stock of the Hoosier at this dinner party.

Whatever may be the truth the New Dealers seem to have concluded that McNutt is the fair-haired boy. Certainly the oil sprayers and grease guns have gone to work. It is just a little like the about-face some of our Communist friends in this country executed after the Hitler-Stalin pact.

Destroyers Are Helpless Against Pocket Battleship

Few laymen understand the difficulties which confront the British and French navies in running down the Nazi pocket battleships. Nearly everyone now knows that there are only about three ships in the whole British navy—the battle cruisers—which are capable both of overhauling the pocket battleships and then sinking them. Incidentally the United States navy has neither the pocket battleship nor the battle cruiser—has none under construction—and unless developments should shake the present determination of the admirals our navy has no intention of ever building them.

But what the layman does not appreciate is the difficulty of hunting down a pocket battleship with numbers rather than with power. In arguments about the situation, for example some laymen will demand to know why a squadron of destroyers does not go after each of the pocket battleships reported to be preying on our commerce, and hound it to death like a pack of wolves might destroy a bear.

Two or three of the wolves might be killed, the layman will say, but the pack would kill the bear. Or, translating the simile, two or five of the destroyers, if the pursuing craft are destroyers, might be sunk, but the squadron would get the pocket battleship.

It is by no means as simple as that. Naval experts say that the only function destroyers could play in such a chase would be as scouts. The only thing they could do would be to locate the pocket battleship, and keep contact with her, so to speak, until a battle cruiser could come up for the kill.

Present-Day Gunfire Is Amazingly Accurate

What the layman does not appreciate in his theory about a whole squadron of destroyers attacking a pocket battleship is the amazing accuracy of present-day gunfire even at tremendous ranges.

Of course the destroyers have slightly greater speed than the pocket battleships, and therefore could determine the range at which the action would be fought. But unless they could come up fairly close under cover of fog without being detected they would all be sent to the bottom before they got close enough to fire a shot or dispatch a torpedo with any hope of its finding its mark.

For accuracy a submarine or torpedo boat must be very much closer to its target than a big-gun ship. For example, the face of a chief gunnery officer of a battleship would be very red indeed if he did not hit a target as big as a destroyer on the third salvo—at a distance of 20,000 yards and with the battleship from which he was firing proceeding at full speed in a rolling sea!

Besides, the pocket battleships carry airplanes, which are not only useful for scouting the surrounding ocean, but can be used with amazing precision, by triangulation, for aiming the heavy guns of the ship when the target is over the horizon.

It would be suicide to send a whole fleet of smaller craft against a pocket battleship except on the long chance that, in fog or mist, they might get close enough to loose a school of torpedoes.

Proposal to Transfer U. S. Ships to Irish Flag

One of the most amazing international moves in all history, so far as its inception is concerned, whether it ever works out or not, is the proposal to transfer ships now flying the United States flag to Ireland instead of Panama.

Actually, it amounted to a straight tip from the President of the United States to the Irish republic and to international shipping men that while the United States government would no longer countenance any transfer of United States ships to the flag of Panama, or any other American republic, the same objections would not lie against their transfer to the Irish flag!

Had the scheme been thought out in advance, and the tip then discreetly conveyed, it would be merely a clever device. It was the way the idea developed that makes it stand out.

Actually President Roosevelt was answering questions of newspaper men about the transfer of United States flag ships to Panama. He had added one argument which had not been printed before—that to do this would be to encourage one of the American republics to take a position on neutrality divergent from that taken by the United States.

With this subject disposed of, the President was then asked about the complaints of the Irish Free State made through its minister in Washington, against the Irish ports being held to be in danger zones, and hence forbidden to ships flying the American flag.

The President expressed his sympathy with Ireland, Belgium, Holland, Denmark (naming these individually) and others, but said that unfortunately the question of whether a particular part of the sea is a danger zone is a question of fact, not sympathy or desire.

Suggests That Irish Buy Some Ships of Their Own

Finally, the President himself suggested that the Irish should have some ships of their own! To the immediate question of whether the United States would be interested in a bid of the Irish for the ships that cannot now be transferred to the flag of Panama, the President indicated that the government might be very willing to sell. To the further question of whether the same objection would apply to the transfer to the Irish flag of ships flying the United States flag which had applied to their transfer to the Panama flag, the President answered emphatically in the negative.

That's how the idea was born, the President stating that he had heard no suggestion of it, but would welcome a proposal!

Most newspaper men at the conference were so intensely interested in the bigger story that the transfer of additional ships to Panama was definitely off—this being the first time that this was really settled—and in the collateral and also tremendous story that Secretary Cordell Hull had again won a spectacular victory (he has never lost a battle since he became head of the department of state) that very little attention was paid to this remarkable Irish story.

But politicians and diplomats alike are speculating since they have been told about it. The thing looks fool-proof. For instance, would the Nazis dare to sink an Irish ship? If they did, what would be the reactions (a) of the Irish government and people, and (b) of the Irish-Americans in the United States?

DON'T GIVE YOUR CHILD

A "Bargain" Remedy You Don't Know All About

A child's life is beyond the price of pennies. Ask your Doctor before giving your child doubtful "bargain" remedies. No family need take this chance today.

Wait. Think first. Are you absolutely sure you should give a single dose of that drug to your child? Internally? It was sold, you recall, as "something just as good" for a few pennies less.

A very dear purchase it could be! For your own peace of mind alone, give no home remedy you're not quite certain about without getting your own doctor's opinion. And never go against it.

Even in the case of the common children's remedy, milk of magnesia, ask your doctor what he approves. And when he says "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" see that you get exactly that by asking expressly for "Phillips'" when you buy—never ask for just "milk of magnesia". If your child prefers Phillips' in the newer form—tiny peppermint-flavored tablets, get it this way. But whether you get liquid Phillips' or Phillips' Tablets get the genuine Phillips'. Ciphered Messages Foil Enemy, But Sometimes They Backfire!

'LISTENING—Operators in recording room of the British Broadcasting corporation, London, listening to stations throughout the world. When they strike an interesting or mysterious broadcast, it's switched to the recorder.

LONDON.—Two British secret service agents were arrested in Germany recently after the Nazis had intercepted their coded radio communications. Thus was completed a thrilling—if unsuccessful—chapter in wartime use of ciphered messages, a procedure developed during the World war and being used by all participants in the present war.

In London, Berlin, Paris and other key cities, code specialists are constantly scanning the ether for secret messages.

Phonograph Ran Down.

Clever tricks are often used to foil the enemy. During the World war the allies puzzled for months over fast, gibberish signals broadcast from the great German radio station at Nauen. Records were made and studied in the allied decoding rooms, but the mystery remained unsolved until one hot day on the Mediterranean when British naval officers were mixing cool drinks and listening to musical selections on their portable phonograph. Finally one officer said: "Well, that's all the records, except for some of the Nauen lightning gibberish."

The record was started, but the first officer forgot to wind the phonograph and none of his companions bothered to stir in the heat. Suddenly an officer jumped to his feet. The "gibberish" on the slowly turning record took form in recognizable code groups, being a message from the German high command to an outpost in East Africa.

Blunder Cost a War.

A code blunder was responsible for Russia's defeat in the World war. Discarding its old cipher in favor of a previously planned new one, the Russians invaded East Prussia with two armies. Through error, only one of the commanding generals had been given the new code, so the field radio proved a boomerang. Neither army could read the other's code, consequently they resorted to "clear," or plain code which the Germans had no trouble intercepting. With this unexpected information, General Von Hindenburg surprised the Russians at Tannenberg on August 26, 1914, and massacred the enemy.

A few weeks later the Russian navy made up for the army's loss. Having sunk a German battleship in the Baltic, a Russian commander ordered that the German dead be picked out of the water and taken to land for a decent burial. One of the first things they found on the person of a dead officer was the lead binding of a code book. Dredging frantically, they soon discovered the book itself and thus acquired not only the code then in use, but the key to the whole system on which German naval codes were built.

Aided Prison Escape.

Codes have been used for centuries, according to "Secret and Urgent," a new Bobbs-Merrill book written by Fletcher Pratt. From ancient Greece until today, codes and ciphers have helped win and lose wars, have caused heads to roll and crowns to topple. One of the best such stories comes from the civil war between Charles I of England and his commons. Sir John Trevanion, locked in jail awaiting execution for participation in the quarrel, received a long letter of condolence from a friend a few hours before his scheduled death. That evening he asked to be taken to the chapel for solitary devotions. When the guards returned, Sir John was gone.

Had cryptographers examined the letter carefully, they would have discovered that by reading every third letter after each comma, the following message was found: "Panel at east end of chapel slides."

Why had she and Bruce come together again? And why had some mischievous alchemy transmuted them from their own independent selves into two beings, each incomplete without the other? That was what she felt now, she thought wistfully—incompleteness. That was what she would always feel whenever she thought of Bruce Lander. But that would never do! She must put that one brief, unforgettable hour behind her forever, that hour she had spent alone with Bruce in the cabin.

Florian had been talking idly and she made a gallant effort now to listen to him. She owed him that, at least, since he was to serve a peculiar purpose now in her struggle to forget her love for Bruce.

"You've made a great hit with the family, Autumn," he told her. "Which is all to the merry, what?"

"What?" she bantered.

He frowned at her. "Are you never going to be serious with me?" he asked gruffly.

With an earnestness that surprised even herself, she laid her hand on his arm. "Do you want me to pretend that I'm serious?" she asked him.

"I'd rather have that than nothing," he replied.

"You are more easily satisfied than I am, darling," she said lightly.

He stooped and tossed a stone into the middle of the pool. The water rippled outward like a sunburst.

"Is there someone else?" he asked after a long silence.

She looked directly at him. "Let's not be so solemn, Florian," she pleaded. "Didn't I hear you say something once about—contempt for life?"

"You did," he said laconically, "and I meant—just that!" He seized her suddenly and kissed her, then held her close while he smiled down into her eyes.

She looked at him with cool reflectiveness for a moment, then drew away from him and turned toward the house. "I think we had better go back," she said quietly.

He followed her, and in a moment she began humming a little tune.

"Some day," he said, taking her arm as he came beside her, "you'll not treat a kiss from me so light, you cold little devil."

"Perhaps," she said with a short laugh. "But in the meantime, darling, let's play together, if you have nothing else to do. It's so much more fun."

CHAPTER VII

Bruce Lander drew his car up beside a score of others that were parked on the gravelled roadway at the rear of the Parr house and stood for a moment listening to the sounds of revelry that issued from that great lighted mansion on the bluff. He smiled to himself, wondering how Autumn would be getting along with Florian's delightful pack of hoodlums. Florian would undoubtedly be in fine fettle himself, Bruce thought, after his team's victory in Kelowna that afternoon. Bruce was sorry he had missed the game, but he had heard about it on his way through town.

It was of Autumn herself, however, as someone entirely apart from the others, that he was thinking with a quickened heart-beat as he mounted the steps of the Parr portico, hat in hand, the cool night wind blowing gently across his hair. A half dozen dim figures were hidden among the shadows on the porch as he stepped to the door where he stood for a moment and listened to the babble of voices from within.

"Oh—Bruce!" a voice called from a corner of the porch.

Linda came gliding swiftly toward him out of the shadows and slipped a hand within his arm.

"Hello, Lin!" he greeted her.

"Are you passing me up on purpose?" she reproached him.

He looked down at her and smiled enigmatically. "Not likely. I didn't see you. How's the little girl friend?" he asked, patting the hand that lay on his arm. "You're looking lovely as ever."

She shrugged her shoulders. "I'm topping! Bored to death, though—until this minute. I've been watching for you all evening. Come on in. The crowd is down in the billiard room playing roulette."

"Who is here?" he asked as they entered the house.

"The same old disgusting crowd," she told him. "Everybody trying to work up the usual Saturday night jag."

A servant took Bruce's hat and topcoat and Linda slipped her hand again into the crook of his elbow and drew it close to her. "It was sweet of you to come," she said. "How've you been?"

"Fine, thanks," he replied, and realized at once that his voice sounded a bit hurried. He straightened his tie when he had not felt since he was a boy. Somehow, quite unreasonably, he knew, he had expected Autumn to be the first to greet him on his arrival.

"Let's have a drink together," Linda suggested. "I've been waiting for you to share my first one of the evening."

He smiled at Linda in assent, and together they went to the butler's pantry which was used by the family as a bar. Bruce paused on the threshold and looked over the small group of young people who were in the pantry.

"Hello, Lander!" called one of Florian's friends, and three or four others set up a chorus of greetings.

"Well, if it isn't the big wool and mutton man all the way from Cherry Creek!"

"Hello, everybody!" Bruce grinned.

"Step up, Lander, and get close to the source of supply," another invited, and Linda drew him beside her and waited while two glasses were filled.

A red-faced youth and a corn-colored blonde girl were perched side by side on the "bar," swaying to and fro and singing a hilarious and not quite proper song that was a legacy from the war to all such gatherings.

"Let's get out of here," Linda said as soon as they had received their glasses.

She drew him away and started for the porch.

"Don't you think we'd better join the crowd in the billiard room?" he ventured.

"And lose you for the rest of the evening?" she retorted. "Not much! I'm going to hang on till I'm helpless. Are you going to put up with us for the night?"

"Impossible, I'm afraid," he replied. "Mother is much better, and I have a good nurse for her, anyway, but I've got to be on the job."

Linda shrugged impatiently as they stepped out upon the shadowy porch. "The gods are a stingy crew," she said.

They sat together on the porch swing and sipped their drinks. Bruce did his utmost to contain his impatience and contribute a civil share of conversation, but in spite of himself he found his eyes roving anxiously toward the lighted hallway.

He paid no heed to the two or three couples who were near them on the porch, or to their confused talk and laughter.

Linda moved close to him and pressed her shoulder under his arm. Her naive boldness was familiar to him now, and he was scarcely aware of her nearness in his own preoccupation.

"Anyhow, it was sweet of you to come all the way down so that I could have an hour with you," she murmured.

"I'm sorry I didn't get down for the game," Bruce returned in a matter-of-fact tone. "I hear Florian gave a good account of himself."

"He played the game of his life," Linda said. "I think it was because Autumn laid a bet on him against Timothy. Poor Florian has taken an awful tumble for Autumn."

Bruce smiled to himself. "Serious?" he asked.

"The most serious thing in his young life. He's potty!"

"Florian has been potty before," Bruce observed.

"I believe it's the real thing this time, though. When the Parrs fall, they fall hard, darling." She paused, but Bruce did not offer a reply. "I think she likes him, too. They hit it off together beautifully."

"I'll never believe Florian is in love until I see it with my own eyes," he said. He harbored a warm feeling almost of pity for Florian as he thought of him.

"You'll see it tonight, then," Linda assured him, "though you won't believe it, even then. You're blind, my dear, quite blind."

"I think I know the signs," he declared.

Soft dance music began drifting out to them now from the radio in the drawing room, and presently the couples seated about the portico disappeared within doors. Linda and Bruce were left alone.

She turned her face impulsively up to him, and he was shaken out of his abstraction by the imploring look in her eyes.

"You don't know the signs," she whispered, "or you couldn't be so cruel to me."

"Cruel?" he asked.

"Cruel—because you are so kind," she said, and her voice seemed to him to be almost a stifled sob.

Bruce flushed. "Good Lord, Lin!" he protested. "You can't blame me for being kind to you. I'm awfully fond of you, girl."

"Fond—" she said wistfully. "That's it—damned fond!"

He laughed awkwardly and stood up, lifting her to her feet. "Yes, I am—damned fond of you, Lin. Come on—let's go in and pick up Florian."

"I'd rather have another drink," she told him.

"Nothing more for me," Bruce answered as he took her arm and started into the house.

In the doorway to the billiard room, Bruce stood for a moment and looked eagerly over the crowd. In the middle of the room a roulette wheel had been set out upon the billiard table, and Timothy Parr was acting as croupier for the evening. The crowd about the table was closely knit, their eyes intent upon the little ivory ball. Above the hum of voices could be heard the snapping of chips and the staccato clink of the ball as it struck the fins. A thin blue cloud of smoke filled the room.

Autumn, in a diaphanous silver dress, was perched on the edge of the table, with Florian standing beside her. In a moment she lifted her eyes and looked at Bruce. He waved to her, but her response was a fleeting smile that was bland and expressionless. Then she withdrew her eyes and turned to watch the game as Timothy set the ball spinning once more.

Bruce was suddenly possessed of an impulse to lay hold of her and carry her bodily out of the room. But at that moment Linda placed herself directly before him and began to tug at his lapels.

"Snap out of it, Bruce Lander!" she said. "What's wrong with you?"

He looked distractedly down at the subtle smile of Linda's crimson lips. "Nothing's wrong, Lin," he replied.

"Let's go into the other room and dance," she invited.

"How about taking a crack at the wheel now that we're here?" he said equably. "Dance later."

With a little moue of disappointment which he chose to ignore, Linda pressed forward to the side of the table and looked on while Bruce bought a pile of chips and waited for the next flip of the ivory ball. When Timothy reached for the spindles again, Bruce placed three chips on squares and offered a handful to Linda.

"I'm topping! Bored to death though—until this minute."

"I'm not lucky," she demurred.

He turned again to the table and waited for the ball to drop into the slot. While he waited he noticed a short, plump man who had had too much to drink pushing his way to the edge of the table beside Autumn.

He could not help seeing that Autumn's hands were clenched on the table edge. Florian stepped between her and the boisterous guest and the game went on.

Autumn stood on a gilt chair beside the crowded table and tossed chips on thirteen and black. She knew that she swayed occasionally; Florian, standing below her, supported her with an arm about her slender hips. Now and then she ran her fingers through his hair and Florian turned his face up to hers with an intense and meaningful look.

She lost again on thirteen and black, and as her laughter pealed out she looked up to see Bruce Lander standing beside the table, his arms folded, his eyes toward the broad French windows that stood open on the other side of the room.

Within her a dull voice repeated over and over again, "I must not see him—I must not see him!" He turned his head slowly toward her now, his mouth drawn up in a quizzical smile so that the deep furrow appeared in his cheek. That furrow in his lean brown cheek, which must have been a dimple when he was a child—she had kissed his cheek just there, in an infinite tenderness, only two nights ago. She felt a terrible vertigo all through her being, a sudden collapse of all her defenses. The feeling lasted for only a moment, however. When he looked at her again she was able to smile with a hard, vivid carelessness.

And then the short plump man lurched toward her, lost his balance, and fell heavily against the chair on which she was standing, clutching Florian in a desperate attempt to right himself. It seemed that before she had reached the floor, Bruce was there, had caught her up and was carrying her out of the confusion through the open French doors and into the sunken garden.

She beat against his breast and sobbed frantically for release. When he put her down at last behind a hedge of honeysuckle, he was breathing heavily. She backed away from him as though to turn and run, but he snatched her hand and pulled her back roughly to him, placing her against the hedge so that she was forced to face him.

"What sort of game are you playing, Autumn?" he demanded.

The silver sheath of her dress seemed to quiver in the starlight. But she stood erect before him, her head flung back, her eyes blazing into his.

"I'm playing—no game," she panted. "Let me go back."

He eyed her coldly. "Either you are playing a game tonight—or you were playing one night before last," he told her.

Her lips quivered over her clenched teeth. "You can judge for yourself," she replied.

He stepped toward her and seized her wrist. "Do you—mean that?" he asked.

She released her wrist with a violent jerk. "Don't touch me—don't touch me!" she cried and shrank from him.

Her voice was a shrill whimper, not loud, not the voice of one utterly beyond control. An incomprehensible pang smote Bruce, a pang of pity, of complete bewilderment.

"Autumn," he said, "what's behind all this? I have a right to know."

"Right?" Her laughter was almost a sob. She crossed her arms over the shimmering bodice of her gown, and her hands clutched spasmodically at her smooth, quivering shoulders. Beneath her arms he could see the vehement rise and fall of her breast. Her russet hair fell back from her forehead, and her eyes were so dilated as they flared into his face that she had the look of a person blind. He drew back from her.

"You are not yourself, Autumn," he said calmly.

"I was not myself the other night, if that's what you mean," she replied. "You see me tonight as I really am—as I intend to be from now on. Ask your mother what I am—she knows what's in the blood."

She made to pass him and he stepped slowly aside.

"As you will," he said quietly.

He stood in the darkness and watched her as she walked toward the house. When she had gone in, he made his way around to the front of the house and entered by way of the portico.

In the hall he met Linda.

"Let's dance, Lin," he said, before she could speak to him. "Or do we hunt up that other drink?"

She looked up at him and smiled slowly.

"I believe you're coming out of your trance," she said, and drew him with her toward the butler's pantry.

CHAPTER VIII

May had passed, and June—and now it was July, the month of the wild-rose. Within its fortress of mountains the valley lay besieged by a torrid heat.

Just a fortnight ago, after a day such as this, Jane Lander had died quietly and unexpectedly in her sleep. Bruce's sorrow had been eased somewhat by his melancholy realization that she was spared further pain and misery from an illness from which there could be no recovery, but his grief at her passing had been none the less deep and lasting.

He had seen very little of Autumn Dean since that night in May when he had gone to the Parrs and had encountered in her a mood which had left him bewildered and harassed every time he recalled that miserable occasion. Only once since that night had he spoken to her. He had called on Hector Cardigan one afternoon and as he mounted the steps to the door, Autumn had come hurriedly out, passing him with a face strangely white and with only a swift word of greeting. He knew she had seen him from within and had rushed away to avoid talking with him.

That visit with Hector had been a doleful affair. The old soldier had been having words with Jarvis Dean's daughter—of that there could be no doubt in Bruce's mind. Hector's grumpy mood had refused to yield to Bruce's efforts at facetiousness. In a moment the old man had burst forth in a voice full of distress. "It's that girl! There's no talking to her!"

"Why get so worked up over it?" Bruce had asked. "Why talk to her?" Even as he spoke, Bruce had known that his comment had been a defensive one.

And then Hector had looked at him for a full minute without speaking, his wrath cooling gradually, his droll smile coming. "There's little to choose between a young fool and an old one—save for a trifling disparity in years," he had said, and had poured a couple of drinks from the decanter of wine on the table.

Bruce was thinking of that afternoon with Hector now as he climbed back into his car and started off along the increasingly difficult trail. The old fellow had reason enough to be distressed, or at least gravely concerned, if Autumn's reputation in the countryside meant anything to him. And Bruce supposed it did.

Hector Cardigan had looked after the girl from her earliest years as anxiously as if he had been her godfather. And Autumn Dean was getting herself talked about rather freely among the gossips of the community. People in Kelowna and in Kamloops were busily recounting her escapades with the Parrs, Florian in particular, and with such others as made the Parr home a rendezvous, and who flocked to their hunting lodge in the mountains near Kamloops for week-ends. They had plenty of fuel for their gossip, and Autumn had apparently been setting a deliberate match to it. As old Hector had said, the girl wasn't giving a tinker's dam what they said about her.

REACTIONS TO THE GOOD NEWS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 11:16-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.—Matthew 11:28-30.

The response which men and women make to the preaching of the gospel today determines their destiny for time and eternity, just as it did when Jesus was first sending out His disciples to preach.

How do you react to the gospel message? Indifference will keep a man from Christ just as effectively as open rejection. A childlike faith, on the other hand, will bring a man into delightful fellowship with Him in both life and service. The Lord gives rest for the soul and companionship in the yokefellowship of Christian service.

I. Childish Dissatisfaction (vv. 16-19).

Jesus, who was skilled in the art of teaching, took a familiar scene from the daily life of the people to show how utterly childish was the criticism of His enemies. Children at play, trying to interest their companions, present a wedding scene of great joy with no response. They then try the opposite with no better result.

The enemies of Christ were just like such children, and His enemies are the same today. Opposition to the gospel likes to clothe itself in learned phraseology and express itself in the terms of dignified logic, but in fact it is but an expression of personal feelings encouraged by the devil and altogether like those of disgruntled children. Not often does it show its true nature in a forthright expression of unbelief and infidelity, for it prefers to hide behind some self-righteous criticism which it can level against Christian people or against their faith.

Why not be honest, unbeliever who reads these lines, and tell the truth about your reasons for failing to accept Christ. When you do that you will find that they are not reasons at all but only excuses, and there will then be hope for your repentance and conversion.

II. Deadly Indifference (vv. 20-24).

Rejection of Christ may be and all too often is simply indifference to His holy person and work. Jesus pronounced an awful judgment on the cities which had been honored by His presence and His great works, and which should have been awed by His message and power but which had passed Him by in bored indifference.

These again are typical of countless thousands who today comfort themselves by saying, "I do not oppose the Church; I'm not against Christianity. I just don't take any position either for or against." By so doing they have declared themselves to be against Christ. Jesus said, "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad" (Matt. 12:30). Let not such think for a moment that their judgment shall be less severe than that of the cities of Chorazin and Bethsaida!

III. Childlike Faith (vv. 25, 26).

God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ have a great and loving interest in the touching beauty of the faith of a child. The unquestioning dependence, the absolute assurance of the child heart, these are the things that receive an answer from the Almighty.

This is not intended to reflect in any way on those who may have learning, wisdom and power but who with all have maintained a childlike humility. God knows them and honors and uses them. The point we do want to make is that all too often learning and standing in this world are a barrier between men and God simply because men put their trust in these things and not in Him. It is always a serious matter when a man permits his God-given ability to think, to come between him and God. What folly it is to expect the infinite and eternal God who made all things, including the brain of man, to in turn pass through the narrow compass of finite thinking.

IV. Restful Companionship (vv. 27-30).

A study of the theories and philosophies of this world leads only to unrest. Bewildered and unhappy is the man who puts his trust in them. But in Christ the weary and belabored human soul will find perfect and eternal rest. Why then does the mass of men reject Him to go on to wander in despair?

The rest which we find in Christ is not a useless and inactive repose. Far from it. It is a blessed yokefellowship with Christ in carrying forward His work. Here man finds his real usefulness, for only here is he liberated from the limitations of sin and self and joined in a yoke with the One in whom dwells all wisdom and power.

What Might Have Been Had Mother Rode Along—

The farmer and his daughter went to market with a load of butter and eggs, and after selling the produce, were returning home with the horse and cart and the money when they were set upon by bandits. The farmer wept as the thieves rode off with his horse and cart.

"Don't cry," consoled the daughter, "they didn't get our money, anyway. I put it in my mouth."

"What a clever girl you are," said the farmer. "Just like your mother. I wish she'd have been here; we might have saved the horse and cart, too."

Tinley Park Community NEWS

The Tinley Park Volunteer Fire department are making plans for their big annual event, a masquerade ball, which they plan to give on January 20th. Many prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. Watch for more particulars regarding this event.

The auction sale held Tuesday on the Walter Mager place drew a big crowd and everything up for sale was readily disposed of at good prices. Edward Schmaedeke of Orland was the auctioneer.

The Tinley Park Fire Department held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday night.

Fire broke out in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Jobson Saturday night. Through the efforts of neighbors and the Tinley Park Volunteer Fire department the fire was extinguished before very serious damage resulted.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our most sincere thanks and appreciation to the many kind neighbors and the Tinley Park Vol. Fire Department who lent a helping hand to save and protect our home and furnishings during the fire Saturday night. We especially thank the Tinley Park Fire Dept., for their splendid job in saving our home.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Jobson Last regular Legion meeting of the Tinley Park Post held December 5 was very interesting. Many new ideas and suggestions were brought up, and they brought forth some very constructive discussions. Commander Wolf asked for some reports on same from different communities for our next regular meeting, Dec. 19. Let's have a good attendance at the meeting and get in on some of our future plans.

The Methodist Ladies Aid held their regular meeting December 6 in the Hirsch home.

The group sang two Christmas carols and after the business of the day the president turned the meeting over to Mrs. John Swisher, program chairman.

Mrs. Swisher read an original descriptive poem of great beauty. As Mrs. Swisher paused in the poetic story of the traveler, Mrs. Sevanson sang Christmas carols.

Mrs. Swisher next told the story of the little boy and the holy wishing well. When she finished the group proceeded to an adjoining room where a table was artistically decorated with candles and a miniature wishing well. As each one placed her gift offering she picked up a lighted candle and paused by the wishing well and made a wish.

There will be a quilting party and pot luck luncheon at Mrs. Henry Brandau's on December 12.

The Ladies Aid will hold a Christmas party at the Hirsch home Dec. 27.

Next Tuesday, December 12, is the regular meeting of the Royal Neighbors, and also election of officers, so will all members turn out and don't forget the pantry shower. After all the canning there must be some bottles, packages, and cans that can be spared, so don't forget to bring them to the meeting and see how good you feel when you think that what you done will make someone else happy. In case you can't bring them to the hall, leave your packages at the home of Mrs. A. Mesenbrink and thanks a lot for the same.

The home of A. Clemens was a scene of gaiety Monday night, when the Hat Shop members met and played. A Christmas party was the occasion and all went home with a prize and Christmas gift.

Owing to the death of a brother of Grandma Hick, the T. P. bunco party was postponed. The next one will be at the home of A. Clemens.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hopman were married 32 years last Monday. She entertained the sewing club at a wonderful luncheon, and received many pretty gifts. Her friends wish them many more. Bunco was the pastime.

Mesdames Walter Becker, Mesenbrink and Clemens motored to White-ing and visited Mrs. Mary Becker.

Mr. and Mrs. Whippman are now residing in the house Swishers vacated this spring.

The first meeting of the Junior League of the Tinley Park Methodist church was held Tuesday evening, December 5, in the parsonage basement.

This group is being sponsored by the Tinley Park Methodist High League.

The main purpose of this meeting was to elect officers. The ones elected are:

President, Russell Andres; first Vice President, Joy Berg; second Vice President, Martha Grace Richards; third Vice President, Mildred Bettenhausen; fourth Vice President, Joan Christ and Fred Zimmermann; Pianist, Dorothy Schluter; Secretary, Joanne Lahti; Treasurer, Arnold Medrow.

The leaders of the Junior League are Marion Andres and Margaret Andres.

Irene Lahti and James Zimmerman, two of the High League officers, were present at this meeting.

Our next meeting will be held Tuesday evening, December 19, at 7 o'clock in the parsonage basement.

At our December P. T. A. meeting Mr. Fred Erickson furnished the music which accompanied the singing of several Christmas carols. The children of Mrs. Hesbol's room portrayed the old English custom of Christmas caroling. Our guest speaker was Mrs. J. W. Heylman, State Chairman of music and art. The third grade mothers, headed by the room mother, Mrs. Hoepfner, had a sandwich sale one day last week which was a great success.

Our guest speaker in January will be Mr. W. H. Hart, who will speak on "Modern Methods in Child Guidance."

Amateur Show At Forest Ridge

Playing to a packed house at the amateur show conducted last Friday by the Forest Ridge School Community Orchestra, 149th & 52nd Ave., the juvenile performers topped the list of winners. Paul Miller, of 152nd & Kenton Ave., son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Miller, and vocal student of Mrs. Dorothy Erickson, was the winner of the first prize of two dollars. His singing and interpretation of "Rag-Time Cow Boy Joe" called for repeated encores. Elsie Mae Snedden, popular local acrobat, came in second. Other cash winners were Clarence Mahaffay, singer; Daniel Simon, 11-year old impersonator; Mrs. Rose Laramie, Hawaiian dancer; and the boxing match in which Howard Fulton as the "Brown Bomber" and Eddie Culpa as the "Big German" brought down the house. All other contestants, numbering 21, were awarded pound boxes of candy which were donated through the generosity of local merchants. According to A. J. Kopp and Mrs. E. G. Fairbank, chairman of the show, nearly all the talent was secured in our own locality. "It was our idea to encourage students of music or other forms of expression such as dancing or dramatics that we decided to give a show in which they could appear before the public. We were swamped with requests for appearances but selected those with a thought to giving variety to the program." The money raised will be used in the orchestra fund.

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Cooper received word last Saturday of the critical illness of Mrs. Cooper's mother, Mrs. Amanda Stonecliff, in her home in Escanaba, Michigan. They immediately for that city and arrived there early Sunday morning. Mrs. Stonecliff passed away Monday home Monday evening and Mrs. Cooper will remain for the balance of the week.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God the Only Cause and Creator" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, December 3.

The Golden Text was, "Let all the earth fear the Lord: let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him. For he spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast" (Psalms 33:8, 9).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Praise ye the Lord. Praise ye the Lord from the heavens: praise him in the heights. Praise ye him, all his angels: praise ye him, all his hosts. Praise ye him, sun and moon: praise him, all ye stars of light. Praise him, ye heavens of heavens, and ye waters that be above the heavens. Let them praise the name of the Lord: for he commanded, and they were created" (Psalms 148:1-5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is. Spirit, Life, Truth, Love, combine as one, and are the Scriptural names for God. All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God" (p. 275).

Orland Student Writes Outstanding Science Theme

The following theme was written by Marion Peters of the Science class of the Orland Park High school.

The sun, at one time existed in space without planets or any other bodies with it. It is said that once a star passed close to the sun, causing great tidal forces. These forces were so strong that much material was torn away from the sun. This material was separated from the sun and collected in solid masses and then cooled. Some of these masses were large and later became the centers of the planets we have in our Solar System today.

At one time the orbit of the earth was not as circular as today. Due to that fact, it crossed the path of many other planetisms. In circling around the sun, the earth bumped into many of these planetisms and they became part of it due to the pull of gravity. In this way the earth grew larger. The earth's rate of growth has decreased a great deal, and today scientists believe that the earth is receiving about one-hundred tons of meteorites and meteoric dust from space each year. As the size increases, the gravity also increases. Great pressure caused from piling up more planetisms cause the earth's interior to become hot again. Shock of collisions with more planetisms added to the heat until the rocky material melted. From this we get our first volcanic action on the earth. During these changes, the heavier rock sunk toward the center and pushed the lighter to the outside. The outside parts of the earth are only three parts as heavy as water, while the inside is ten times as heavy as water. It is believed that the interior of the earth is made up chiefly of iron and nickel, such as are found in many meteorites.

How Were the Continents and Oceans Formed?

The formations of the great continents and ocean basins were begun in the early stages. The falling of large planetisms left the surface of the earth irregular. There was a great deal of dust-like materials which could be carried about by the winds and washed from the atmosphere by rain. The action of wind and rain is said to have caused a slight difference in the kind of material left in different places. The light materials were deposited in certain places and the heavier kinds in others. The heavier parts of the earth sank down toward the center, lifting the lighter parts upward.

The lower places filled with water and became oceans. The lighter parts stood above the water and are now known as continents. Therefore, the ocean beds are composed of heavier materials than the continents. This has been proven by actual measurement.

How Are the Rocks Softened and Broken to Pieces?

As soon as a certain rock surface is exposed to air, sunshine, and rain, the oxygen, carbon dioxide, and water cause chemical changes in the rock so that it becomes softer. The sun shines on it during the day and the surface gets warm, or even hot. At night, and in the winter, it becomes very much cooler. Heating causes it to expand, while cooling them causes them to shrink and later break. By expanding as it freezes, the water is able to exert a pressure of several tons to the square inch and thus, bursts rocks.

The roots of plants also help to break up rocks. The broken rocks does not remain where it was formed.

How Does Moving Water Wear Away the Land?

The process of wearing down is called erosion. The chief agent is running water. Running water on hills run downward because of the pull of gravity. These streams carry particles of soil and rock with them. The streams soon dig valleys for themselves as they cut deeper into the soil and rock. As the highlands are worn away, the valley grows older and the sides take on a more gentle slope, causing the rate of erosion to become much less. It is estimated that the surface of the earth can be lowered at the rate of one inch in seven hundred and fifty years. This is very slow. Moving water wears away shores of lakes. The wind drives great waves against the shore and breaks the rock off. Some of the water sinks down into the soil and cracks of the rock. Water can dissolve minerals as it would salt. Limestone is the easiest dissolved. Water wears away rock by two methods: (1) It carries away pieces of rock which grind down the surface with which they come in contact, and (2) It dissolves material in the rock and thus assists in the gradual wearing away of the rocks.

How Do Glaciers Wear Away the Land?

There are some places where more snow falls in winter than will melt in the summer. Due to this, great masses accumulate. Under pressure, the layers are pressed into solid ice. It's movements are also due to pressure. Glaciers are found in high mountain valleys and on the highlands in cold countries. The glaciers cut away the land and make valleys. Scientists can tell where glaciers have passed because they leave deep scratches in the rock. Mount Rainer has more than twenty-eight glaciers on its side. All the projecting rock features are smoothed away by the ice.

How Does Moving Air Wear Away the Land?

Dry dust on exposed places is picked up and carried away. Rocks are exposed to the currents of air, carrying sand. They are worn away and shaped into various forms. Plants protect the soil from the wind, and hold it in place.

Water carries much heavy material with it. When it slows down, it must deposit all this. Later the sand is dropped. Water-formed deposits are distinguished by layers, or strata. Different strata may also be formed at different seasons of the year when the rates are different. At the bottom of the quiet water is a layer of mud while the sides are level flood plains. At flood time, when the water runs out over the flood plain, more material is dropped near the river than farther back. These deposits raise the land near the river and build up levees. When a larger flood occurs, the river may leave its old bed and seek a new channel in a lower part of the plain. The current of the river slackens when it reaches the ocean waters. All but the finest mud settles near the mouth, making deltas. A great many interesting features of the earth have been formed by the deposit of minerals carried in the water. Not all the formations made from dissolved minerals are found in the ground. Cracks deep in the rocks are sometimes filled with minerals carried there by the water.

How Do Glaciers Build Up the Land?

Glaciers carry away all, or most of the material that it cuts away. When the ice melts, its load of material drops. Ridges are piled up in front of and along side of the glaciers. These are called moraines. Some of the material is carried away by streams formed by the melted ice. Hollows left among moraines are filled with lakes and swamps.

How Does Wind Build Up the Land?

Dry sand is blown along until some object interferes with the moving air. It is then dropped behind the object and piled up. The sand continues to be blown upon the mound until a dune is formed. The dunes must be held by plants, otherwise they will be moved forward by the wind, traveling as much as fifty feet a year. The soil that is moved by different agencies from one place to another is called transported soil, that which stays in one place is called residual soil. Much of the transported soil is changed to rock.

How Are Rocks Formed From Eroded Materials?

Rocks formed, due to erosion are sedimentary rocks. These rocks have noticeable layers, and are called Stratified rocks. There are four kinds of sedimentary rocks: limestone, sandstone, shale, and conglomerate. When animals, they fall to the bottom of the ocean and decay. Most of these rocks are formed from pressure.

How Does Volcanic Action Build Up The Earth's Surface?

If we were to dig deep in a mine, we would find that the temperature increases one degree every fifty or sixty feet. When we reach the depth of seventy-five miles, the temperature is hot enough to melt iron. This intense heat is caused by great pressure of the crust of the earth; also the earth is undergoing chemical changes. The pressure is relieved now and then by shifts of the earth's crust. Due to this, some of the rock melts and forms molten rock called magma, while it is inside and lava after it reaches the surface. This magma works its way to the surface and forces its way between rocks and hardens into igneous rocks. This magma may sometime reach the surface and build up volcanoes. In some places, there are 150,000 square miles of lava-covered ground.

How Are Mountains and Plateaus Formed?

Scientists as yet have not been able to explain the rise and fall of land at different times. Some valley of great rivers can be traced for hundreds of miles beneath the ocean. Some sedimentary rock can only be found in water and yet we find some on mountains thousands of feet above water. There are some places where the force has been so great that rocks have been broken and slipped past each other. These great processes are called diastrophism. It causes folded mountains, and block mountains are formed from these plateaus. It takes a great many years to form a mountain. Metamorphic rocks are changed rocks. Granite changes to gneiss, sandstone to quartzite, limestone to marble, and shale to slate.

How Are Events of the Past Discovered?

Geologists have watched the waves pile up pebbles, sand, and shells. From this, they can recognize beaches which have existed in the past. They can also tell by reading history. The most reliable identifying marks of the different strata of rock are called fossils. From this, they can tell from what period they came and the climate of this period. When one old layer of rock rests upon a young sloping layer, it is called as unconformity.

Republicans Hear Senator Searcy Announce His Candidacy for Gov.

thirty word answer three times with uproarious applause and cheers. His hearers overflowed the high school auditorium.

In announcing his candidacy Searcy stressed the importance of a strong Republican ticket in the field next fall.

"The Republican requisite for 1940 in Illinois if we expect to win, is a state ticket of men whose public and partisan records invite confidence," he asserted.

"Tradition calls for a nominee for U. S. senator from Cook county, and nominee for governor from downstate," he told the throng at the high school. "This will be a wholesome, practical and commonsense distribution—if November victory next year is the objective."

"In that connection, with official records as my authority, I convey the information that the largest vote ever given by Cook county voters to a Republican candidate for governor, was given to a downstate."

"The average Illinois Republican is not so much interested in the primary skirmish of next April as he is in winning the war next November. Yet, the great rural vote of downstate is admittedly necessary to victory, and any effort to chill the interest and effort of that great area may invite defeat."

"Rank and file voters are tired of factional battles. They want harmony. They are sick of the political psychology of murder, which says: 'Wipe out this clique, or that; destroy so and so.'"

"That isn't Republicanism. It is plain cannibalism."

"If the nominee for governor is to be a victim of prejudice; one for whom retaliating factional groups whetted knives of vengeance in consequence of a bitter and unrequited primary melee—the like of which Illinois Republicanism has suffered in recent years—if that be the 1940 program, why waste time on a campaign next year?"

"I propose plain talk before this campaign is over. I have kept free of factional entanglements, both in Cook county and downstate. Almost every Republican leader in Illinois is my personal friend. I know the wishes of earnest Republican men and women in the precincts. They are sick of the new deal, and they want it supplanted. But, they want the transition to bring them superior government, not inferior; they want high American standards, not further demoralization; they want honesty, not rackets."

"The people want men as party leaders who know Illinois; men who will regard them with fairness after election; men who are familiar with the Illinois way of doing things; men whose word is good and who, elevated to office, will pursue policies that will crystallize public sentiment back of Republicanism for many years to come."

"We can win next year, if we use common sense. But, if we win next year, the Republican party will face four years of probation. Either we will make good with Illinois, or we will evaporate thereafter, as a party, into unlamented shadows of memory."

"The governorship of Illinois, commencing in 1941, will not be any merry holiday. It is not going to be anyone's social triumph—if the incumbent has a worthy perspective. The job will call for hard, unceasing work. It will require familiarity with every nook and corner in Illinois, and with the people who live there, irrespective of race, creed, color or political affiliation."

"Farm interests of Illinois demand the sort of governmental co-operation that will guarantee a decent share of profits for the commodities they produce. Illinois' next governor must know the state's hinterland, and the problems that abound there. He must know our great metropolitan areas, and, in sympathetic knowledge, work with their people in furtherance of their common good. Labor must be given wholesome aid; and business interests, all who employ wage earners, must be given a chance to exist profitably."

"One of the most gratifying phases of my legislative career has been the repeated endorsements, expressions and demonstrations of confidence by agriculture, labor and business. You cannot cripple those three institutions without injuring government itself."

"For a quarter of a century, I have been a student of Illinois government. A few years ago, I presented a plan in the senate, to reduce drastically the structure then attained. That proposal got no further than committee, due to new deal interception. Necessity for retrenchment was urgent then; it is uncompromisingly compelling now. either we shall reduce our governmental overhead soon, or bankruptcy will stalk taxpayers."

"I have been in every county in Illinois, not once, but many times. Friends abound in every Illinois township. Everywhere I go, I find the same demand—for lower taxes, less of bureaucracy, guarantees that freedom will not gradually slip away."

"Literally, thousands of Illinois voters, in recent months, have asked me to submit my candidacy for nomination for the high office of governor. I appreciate these requests. They have pointed out that I have been close to Illinois affairs long enough to know them intimately. They have urged, further, that since the new deal has squandered its way to infamy by following the witless mental swirlings of neophytes and amateurs, Illinois Republicanism ought to proceed in sound contrast, under a leadership grounded upon experience and knowledge."

"I have postponed decision on the question of candidacy, to see whether some outstanding Illinoisan, versed in state problems thru long association, qualified and accepted by all groups and so-called factions, might be suggested for the office of chief executive. No development of this nature seems now probable. Whether I could be regarded as meeting needed requirements is a question that only the primary voters can decide. Under the laws of Illinois, theirs is the court of final decision. No selfish, or self-appointed clique, group or sinister interest is going to take away the rights of your primary electors, unless you yourself surrender them."

"On August 10 last, here in Palmyra, where I was born, beloved friends, old and new, presented me with a written and signed petition. You asked me two questions: First, would I become a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor; second, would I, when I reached a decision, return to my native hearth to make the first public announcement of that decision."

"Responding to the first—my answer is 'Yes. I shall be, and am, a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Illinois, subject to the will of the Republican voters as expressed in the statewide primary of next April 9.'"

Senator Searcy, native Illinoisan, was born May 14, 1887 in the village of Palmyra, son of the late James Buchanan Searcy, lawyer and

VERRILL IN D' HOUSE

CHICAGO.—Virginia Verrill, vivacious vocalist rated tops among the nation's low blues singers, vaults into the featured singing role on Uncle Walter's Dog House program heard over the NBC red network each Tuesday night.

The great-great-niece of George Washington, Miss Verrill is a Hollywood native who's made good in Hollywood. She made her motion picture debut as a double for the singing voice of Barbara Stanwyck, and later became a film star in her own right. Her own reputation as a vocalist traveling under her own name was established in later movies and as songstress with Orville Knapp's orchestra.

mas trees, Santa Clauses, and other Christmas decorations. Next week they will begin making scrap books to be sent to children's hospital wards for Christmas.

All three grades are working hard learning carols for the Christmas program.

The attendance percentage for November was 97.2 per cent, while tardy cases numbered ten.

Intermediate Room

The intermediate room is attractively decorated for the Christmas season, with a scene of the wisemen and shepherds forming a border across the front of the room and a border of candle posters across the back of the room.

The pupils wish to thank Raymond McGuire's grand father, Mr. Morrison, for the splendid posters he gave to them. This poster has several fine pictures showing how flags are made in factories.

The room enjoyed their radio hour last Friday afternoon when they heard the story of "Iduna and Her Apples" dramatized by Evanston boys and girls.

This story was especially interesting as the sixth grade have read it in their readers.

There was an attendance percentage of 96.3 in the intermediate room, with one tardy case in November.

Junior High Room

Christmas decorations are being put up and Christmas cheer is in the air. A poem written by a Junior High pupil adds to this merry note.

When My Dreams Come True
I'm gonna take a trip up to the moon

The only place where chocolate sodas bloom.

To where the swingbirds truck on through the room

When my dreams come true,
I'm gonna build a castle grand and tall

With lots of candy slots upon the wall

And not be able to hear the dishes call

When my dreams come true,
I'm gonna listen to Benny Goodman and his boys

Without the usual yell of "Stop that noise!"

And have a room for the jitterbug

So I won't have to worry about Ma's good rug

When my dreams come true,
I'll have all the public schools I know of closed

And used for only picture shows

When my dreams come true,
But then I suppose I won't keep my allowance

Through the whole long week

Or keep from getting punished, too

When my dreams come true,
But 'til then things will go the same old way

I'll go to school to study every day

And think of things to say and do

Yes, if and when my dreams come true.

High School Room

94.2 per cent of the enrollment was present during this last month, two people were tardy.

This week's reporters were Charlotte Gorney, Earl Schoeneck, Dean Rueckert, Melvin Nordsell, and Nick Heiman. Special work was done by Ruth Lowe and Eleanor Hostert.

Sports

Mokena won both games at Manhattan November 21, the grade school winning 16 to 14 in a close game, and the high school winning by a score of 25 to 22. The teams did not do so well at Crete on Dec. 1, however. They lost both games. The grade school was defeated 29 to 7, while the high school lost a high scoring game, 42 to 23.

The next two games will be with Matteson, there on December 8, at 7:30 p.m.

The school "Pep Club" has added much gaiety with its clever cheers under the leadership of Lois Guindon and Catherine Reid.

Frigidaire with the Meter-Miser

• These are absolute facts! "Makeshift" refrigeration methods are costly as well as dangerous. For even in winter, temperatures are seldom within the food-safety zone of 32 to 50 degrees. U. S. Weather Bureau records bear that statement out. And, unless foods are kept within that safety-zone, they spoil quickly—and that means a direct loss of money!

By ending these losses, you can save as much as $10 a month with a new Frigidaire. That's the figure that present Frigidaire owners estimated they were saving as proved by a national survey of over 58,000 women. So we say—by buying your new Frigidaire now—you'll save $50 this winter. Come and let us prove it to you!

ORLAND PARK

The village board meets next Monday. The re-zoning matter which was canceled recently, will come up again for rehearing.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Beagley and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cooper attended the housewarming of the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler in Mokena last Saturday evening.

A number of people from this section have been attending the stock show in Chicago the past week.

Mrs. Chas. Hahenlein continues to improve nicely from the injuries she suffered in a recent automobile accident.

The Orland Park PTA will hold their next meeting and Christmas program next Thursday night in the school auditorium.

A unique "Pumpkin Pie" social was held in the Methodist church parlors Wednesday night by the Adult Bible Class. A fine time was enjoyed.

Orland Park Club News

The Public Health and Welfare department, with Mrs. Wesley J. Lindquist chairman, will have charge of the meeting to be held in the Creer hall on December 14.

At one o'clock a pot-luck luncheon will be served by the hostesses, Mesdames, Stewart Loebe, David Krueger and Samuel S. Leavitt. Each member is requested to bring her own plate, cup and silver for this luncheon.

Following the luncheon a sale of rugs, mats, paintings and other articles made by the patients of the Therapy Department in Oak Forest infirmary, will be conducted by Mrs. Erick Marks, 3rd district chairman of Occupational Therapy.

The guest speaker of the day will be the well known Dr. Guy M. Cushing of Chicago, who will give an amusing and instructive talk on the subject "Speaking of Your Operation." Other guests also appearing on the program will be Mrs. Erick Marks, Mrs. S. C. Kehl, public health chairman and Mrs. Wm. Peters, welfare chairman of the third district.

An invitation to this meeting has been extended to the Palos Park, Palos Heights and Tinley Park Woman's clubs.

A special meeting was held at the home of Mrs. David Krueger on Tuesday evening, November 28, at which time arrangements were made that members bring oranges, candy, hard candy preferable, loaf sugar and tea to the December 14th meeting. Mrs. Wesley J. Lindquist, chairman, and Mrs. Roxie Brown will arrange a Christmas basket of these articles and the following day will distribute them among the patients in their assigned ward at the infirmary.

It was suggested that each member also bring four of her favorite receipts to the meeting which will be compiled together into an attractive Cook Book by Mrs. Lindquist and Mrs. Brown. When completed these cook books will be for sale.

The card and bunco party which was planned for January 5 has been deferred to February 10.

The Garden club will discontinue its meetings until next March.

Orland Park H. S. Notes

The following people have been chosen for parts in the play, "Pop Reads the Christmas Carol."

Mr. Jones, the father, Clifford Horn; Mrs. Jones, the mother, Vera Zerbs; Paul, the older son, LeRoy Yates; Junior, the kid brother, Bill Maddox; Mary, the daughter, Betty Marshall; Jane, Paul's girl friend, Eleanor Knox; Jack, Mary's boy friend, Bud Cox.

Miss Nellie G. McMahon and Mr.

Ten Mokena boys are to receive Tenderfoot badges at a special installation program at the Mokena school, December 20, for the new Boy Scout Troop No. 40, sponsored by the Mokena Civic Ass'n.

The Troop has recently been organized and promises to be an outstanding Troop in the Indian Trail District of the Potawattomi Trails Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Indian Trail District comprises all communities in Orland, Bremen townships in Cook county, Frankfort and Green Garden townships in Will county. Frankfort township was transferred to Potawattomi Trails Council from Rainbow area Council in April, 1938. The Council Office of the Potawattomi Trails Council is located in Harvey.

The Scout executive of the area is Harold G. Boltz.

Mokena's new Troop has been served by Mr. Boltz and True Daniels, Tinley Park, Neighborhood Commissioner for Indian Trail District. The organization of Troop 40, and a unit in Frankfort under the sponsorship of the Frankfort Civic club completes the set-up of a Boy Scout Troop in every community in the Indian Trail District.

The installation of Troop 40 will be a colorful and inspirational occasion. Coupled with the ceremonies

Belting, state high school inspector, visited school Tuesday morning.

Orland Couple Celebrate Two Thanksgiving Days

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Rudisel, former Orland couple were lucky enough to celebrate two Turkey days.

On the 23rd they were in St. Louis, Mo. Missouri held that day as the legal holiday. On the 30th they were in Memphis, Tenn., which was their legal holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudisel were in St. Louis during the recent earthquake, which shook buildings, rattling the dishes in the cupboards and shelves, and cracking the walls of many buildings.

Mrs. Rudisel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Walston of 143d street, Orland Park.

"I Saw It in the News Review" is a common expression among those who keep well informed on current events. They know that in the "Weekly News Review," which appears regularly in this paper, they obtain a comprehensive interpretation of world events written by Edward W. Pickard, one of the nation's most widely-known news commentators.

Weekly News Review

deals with the important happenings and their effect upon our country. It is more than news—it is an interpretation of the news, and therefore much more valuable to the person who wants to understand what is going on in the world today.

Read it carefully from week to week. You will find it interesting and helpful in your discussion of world events with your neighbors and friends.

Printing

Is But a Small Part of the Cost

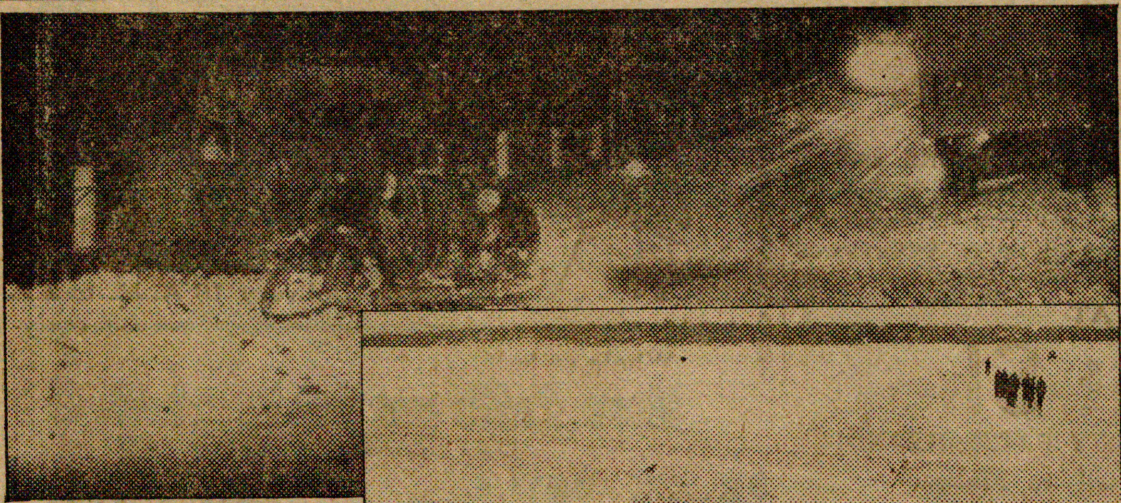

IN getting out a circular, circular letter or other piece of printed matter. The paper, the addressing, the mailing easily total more than the printing. Yet, in a large measure, the Results Depend Upon the Printing.

Let us show you some samples to illustrate our statement

In King's Drawing Room

During the reign of terror in France in the early 1790s the prisons of Paris presented a scene seldom witnessed in history. In the evening the aristocrats of both sexes assembled in the common jail room—always called by them the drawing room—powdered and elegantly dressed; saluted one another by their former noble names, played cards and chess just as though they were assembled in the king's palace.

WINTER TRAFFIC TOLL SPURS DRIVE TO REDUCE SLIPPERY PAVEMENT ACCIDENTS

Above: Accidents like this, in fearful number each winter, have focused attention on methods of prevention.

Top right: The National Safety Council measured stopping distances at various speeds on a frozen lake last winter.

Lower right: Skidproofing icy pavements with calcium chloride treated sand or cinders cut stopping distance in half, Iowa researchers found.

REMEMBER the days when "automobiling" was almost strictly a summer sport? The days when muddy roads in spring and fall, and snow-jammed roads in winter, kept motor cars in their garages from November through to May? The motorist who operated his car the year-round then was really a bear for punishment.

Paved roads, the tremendous increase in car ownership, social and business growth, have changed all this. Today the one who "puts his car up for the winter" is the rare exception.

Winter use of highways has brought many advantages but along with the benefits has come an alarming increase in traffic fatalities. So serious has the winter accident record become that safety engineers and highway departments throughout the country are uniting as never before in a determined drive to reduce the heavy casualty toll.

The most treacherous road condition the winter driver has to face is icy pavements. Snow-bound roads may stop or slow up travel, but icy roads spell danger with every revolution of the auto's wheels.

Tests and research studies to determine ways and means of reducing the hazards of icy pavements have been conducted during the past winter by the National Safety Council, the Iowa Engineering Experiment Station, the University of Michigan and others. As a result of these tests and similar ones now under way, engineers are developing methods of ice control that will place winter driving on a much safer basis in the future. The effectiveness of tire chains, skidproofing icy pavements with sand or cinders, and means of removing ice where possible are included in the projects.

The Iowa experiments revealed, along with other significant data, that the distance required to stop a motor vehicle on icy pavement can be cut in half by spreading a thin coat of calcium chloride treated sand or cinders over the icy surface. The calcium chloride treatment was found necessary to melt the sand or cinders into the ice, as otherwise the dry materials are easily whisked off the road by traffic and wind.

While skidproofing treatment of icy highways decreases the possibility of accidents, the measure must be looked upon as a means to accident prevention and not a cure. Along this line, a note of caution is sounded by the National Safety Council in stating, "In the final analysis, good, old-fashioned, careful, common sense driving is the best antidote for skidding and accidents on icy roads."

Engineers and highway officials are extending ice control measures as fast and far as possible to reduce the hazards of winter driving but the cause of safety will always depend to a large extent upon the headwork of the individual driver.

Pictures Show Motorists When Not To Pass

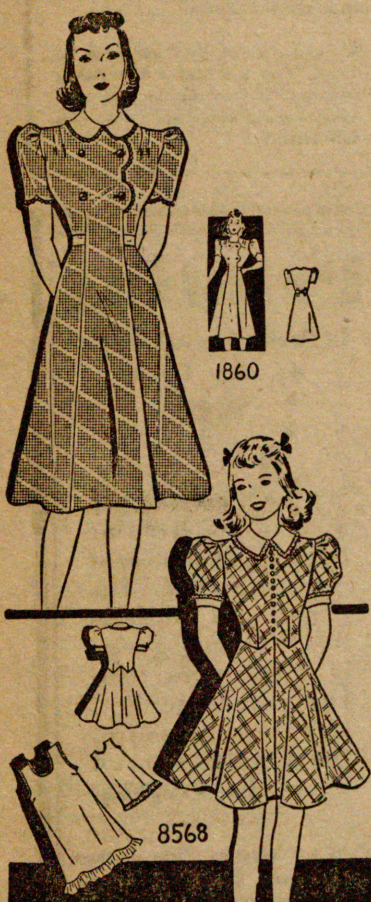

Illinois state traffic laws, according to State Division of Highways safety technicians, prohibit overtaking and passing other vehicles in any of the eight situations pictured above. Violation of these provisions of the law are liable to lead to arrest, or, what is worse, to serious accidents. Last year 47 reported accidents, in which 69 persons were killed on Illinois highways, resulted from improper passing.

Two Crisp Patterns With Double Values

START the day cheerily, in this comfortable, crisp little morning frock, 1860, with four buttons and several scallops. It has a two-way neckline so that you can vary its personality by making it up both ways in different materials—sometimes with the tailored collar and sometimes with the plain square neckline. Choose gingham, percale, linen and calico for this.

Basque Frock, Slip Included.

Here's a godsend for busy mothers—a practical pattern (8568) that includes both a basque frock for school, and a pretty slip. You can really solve most of your small daughter's school problems by using this two-way pattern, time and again. It's very easy and quick to do. Make the frock of challis, wool crepe, gingham, percale—and in velveteen it will be sweet for parties, too.

The Patterns.

NIGHT COUGHS DUE TO COLDS

Need More Than "Salve" To Quickly Relieve DISTRESS!

Before you go to bed rub your throat, chest and back with warming, soothing Musterole. You get such QUICK relief because Musterole is MORE than "just a salve." It's a marvelous stimulating "counter-irritant" which helps break up local congestion and pain due to colds. Its soothing vapors ease breathing.

3 Christmas Islands, Harbor, Cove, Sound, Are Found in Atlas

Not one, but three Christmas islands will celebrate the Yuletide this year, all of them under the British flag. The first is located in mid-Pacific and is really a submerged mountain 15,000 feet high with only its top above water. The second, in the Indian ocean, is forest-covered and had a population of 40 when the last census was taken in 1898. The last Christmas island is near Cape Breton in the maritime provinces of Canada.

France has a Christmas harbor on Desolation or Kerguelen island about 2,000 miles southwest of Australia. The United States has a Christmas cove near Boothbay harbor, Maine, which is a summer resort.

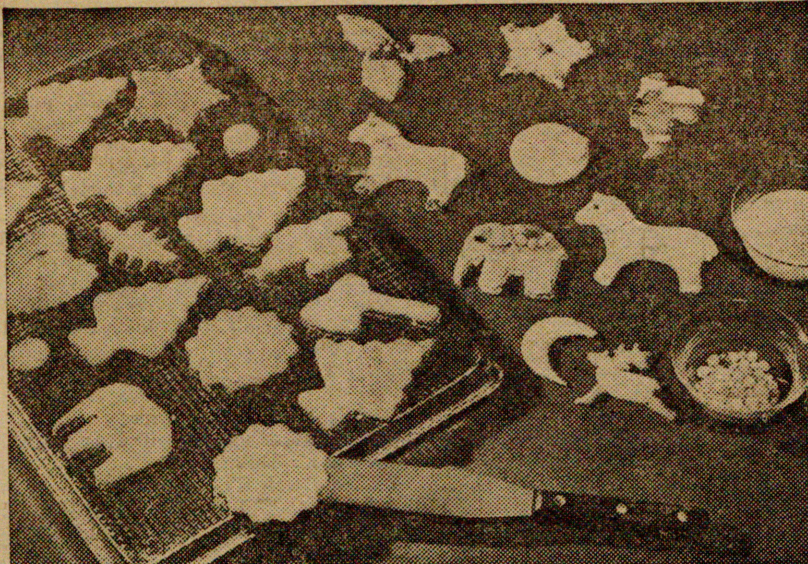

There is also a Christmas sound near the southern tip of South America about 120 miles northwest of Cape Horn and located in an island belonging to Chile.

1939 Toys Sprout Wheels

As Kids Imitate Parents

Today's civilization-on-wheels has revolutionized the Twentieth century toy industry. Several decades ago children played with paint sets and cut-out dolls. Now girls and boys want wheel goods. The desire to have an automobile like dad's is so great that toy auto manufacturers must change their designs as soon as new models appear. Velocipedes must be streamlined, scooters must have pneumatic tires, and doll carriages must be of the latest baby buggy designs.

COOKIES MAKE CHARMING CHRISTMAS GIFTS

(See Recipes Below)

Holiday Fruit Cakes And Cookies

Half the thrill of Christmas is in the pre-holiday preparations. Making cakes that are crammed with fruit and nuts, baking an endless variety of cookies to be frosted and "trimmed" in true holiday fashion, and packing gift boxes of Christmas confections, is as much fun as the great day itself!

Fruit cakes are a Christmas holiday tradition. The dark cakes do improve with age and should be made as early as possible. They won't mold or dry out if they're properly stored. Wrap the cooled cakes well in wax paper, then store in tightly covered cans. If you like, brandy or wine may be spooned over the cakes at two-week intervals during storage. White fruit cakes make a pretty contrast with the dark, but they dry out rather soon and should be eaten within a few weeks after baking.

Don't forget that fruit cakes, cookies, and small plum puddings make charming Christmas gifts, especially for the friends and relatives who'll be away from home on the holiday.

Christmas Fruit Cake.

(Makes 10 pounds)

- 1 1/2 pounds currants
- 3 pounds seedless raisins
- 1 pound citron
- 1 pound mixed candied fruit
- 1 pound candied pineapple
- 1 pound candied cherries
- 1 cup butter
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 6 eggs
- 4 cups pastry flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 tablespoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup fruit juice or wine

Cut fruits. Cream butter and add sugar. Add well-beaten egg yolks. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately with fruit juice or wine to the butter mixture. Add fruit. Fold in beaten egg whites. Place in baking pans lined with wax paper. Cover pans with cheesecloth and steam 5 hours. Then bake one hour in a slow oven (275 degrees).

Glaze Finish for Fruit Cakes.

- 1 1/2 cups water
- 3/4 cup granulated sugar
- 3/4 ounce Gum Arabic (4 1/2 teaspoons)

Place sugar and water in a saucepan and boil to the thread stage (230 degrees). Add Gum Arabic and heat again just to the boiling point. After fruit cake has been baked, remove from the oven and garnish with nuts and fruits as desired. Then pour the Gum Arabic mixture over the fruit cake in a thin stream, and manipulate as little as possible in order to avoid crystallization of the glaze.

Plum Pudding.

(Serves 6)

- 1/2 cup milk
- 3 1/2 cups soft bread crumbs
- 1/2 pound suet (ground)
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 eggs (separated)
- 2 cup seedless raisins
- 3/4 cup currants
- 1/2 pound figs (cut fine)
- 1/2 cup citron (sliced thin)
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon mace
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup apple cider

Scald milk and pour over bread crumbs. Cool. Cream ground suet in warm bowl. Add sugar, cream together thoroughly, and add well-beaten egg yolks. Combine these two mixtures. Add cut fruits together with spices and salt. Add cider. Lastly, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into well-greased pudding mold. Cover tightly and steam for 6 hours. Serve with hard sauce.

White Fruit Cake.

(Makes 5 1/2-pound fruit cake)

- 3/4 cup butter
- 2 cups sugar
- 7 eggs (separated)
- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup sweet milk
- 1 teaspoon lemon extract
- 1 pound white raisins
- 1/2 pound figs
- 1/2 pound blanched almonds
- 1/4 pound citron
- 1/2 pound candied cherries
- 1/2 pound candied pineapple

Cream butter and add sugar. Separate eggs, beat egg yolks and add. Mix and sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Add lemon extract. Cut fruits and add. Blend well and fold in well-beaten egg whites. Place in pans lined with wax paper and bake 1 hour in a very slow oven (275 degrees); then increase heat slightly (300 degrees) and bake 2 hours more.

Old Spice Wonder Fruit Cake.

- 1/2 cup butter
- 1 cup light brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups cake flour
- 1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- 3/4 cup sour milk
- 1/2 cup citron (cut)
- 1 cup raisins
- 1 cup nut meats (broken)
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream butter, add sugar, and beat thoroughly. Add eggs (well beaten). Mix and sift together all dry ingredients, reserving 1/4 cup of flour. Add flour mixture and sour milk alternately—beginning with the flour mixture.

Flour citron, raisins, and nuts with the 1/4 cup of flour which was reserved and add to the cake mixture. Add vanilla extract. Place in well-greased, small tube pan. Bake 40 to 45 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees).

Rollad Orange Cookies.

(Makes about 8 dozen)

- 1/2 cup fat
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 1/4 teaspoon orange peel (grated)
- 1 egg (beaten)
- 1/2 cup orange juice
- 3 to 3 1/2 cups flour (all purpose)
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt

Cream the fat. Gradually cream in the sugar. Add the grated orange peel and beaten egg, and gradually add the orange juice. Add the 3 cups flour, baking powder, and salt which have been sifted together. Mix in well, adding more flour if necessary to make dough just stiff enough to roll. Chill thoroughly. Place on lightly floured board and roll 1/4 inch thick. Cut, and place on greased baking sheet, and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 10 to 12 minutes.

Lemon Icing.

- 2 cups powdered sugar
- 1/4 cup melted butter
- 3 tablespoons water
- 1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon lemon peel (grated)

Mix all together, stirring until creamy. Spread at once.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

SO MANY readers have asked for more spool ideas after seeing the directions for spool shelves in Sewing Book No. 3, that I know you will love making these amusing toys.

The two spools for the doll's arms are strung together with cord. Start with these, then bend the body wire over the center of the cord. Run both ends of the wire through the two body spools, then bend the wires and run them through the spools for the legs. Bend in flat loops for the feet. Twist wire around the bonnet spool and fasten to body tightly so the bonnet tips up at the back. Cut a face out of a fashion magazine or draw one and paste it on the front of the bonnet spool. The dress is of two straight pieces; the bright sash and bonnet ribbons match.

One end is cut off the spool for the dog's head. Bend the wire over the whiskers, then run both ends through the head and neck spools. Run one end through the two leg spools, then both through the body and one through the back spool. Twist together around the tail.

NOTE: Readers who are now using Sewing Books No. 1, 2 and 3 will be happy to learn that No. 4 is ready for mailing; as well as the 10-cent editions of No. 1, 2 and 3. Mrs. Spears has just made quilt block patterns for three designs selected from her favorite Early American quilts. You may have these patterns FREE with your order for four books. Price of books—10 cents each postpaid. Set of three quilt block patterns without books—10 cents. Send orders to Mrs. Spears, Drawer 10, Bedford Hills, New York.
